

Is Your Material a Good Fit for ERIC?

ERIC is a digital library of education research, sponsored by the U.S. Department of Education. ERIC's Selection Policy guides which content is suitable for its collection. All publications in ERIC have to meet the criteria shown below.

Is Your Content...

1

Education research?

Education research could include data analyses, literature reviews, methodological work, critiques of theories, logic models, or other related materials.

2

An acceptable material type?

Acceptable materials include journal articles, papers, briefs, reports, or books. ERIC does not index textbooks, lesson plans, blogs, or html-only text.

3

In English?

Journals must have at least 80% of articles in English. ERIC only indexes materials that are in English.

5

Complete and free of copyright disputes?

Content must be in final form, and publishers must provide evidence of transparent and ethical publishing practices.

4

Relevant and substantive?

Materials must address relevant education topics in a rigorous and substantive way.

Preference may be given to peer-reviewed or open-access content. ERIC does not index subject-matter materials (e.g. journals about the subjects of science, mathematics, economics, etc.)

If you would like to recommend a source that meets the criteria listed above, email us at ERICRequests@ed.gov.

For more information, see a video that describes the process ERIC follows for selecting new content for indexing.
